

Abstract

A method is proposed for monitoring at least one object in a scene, which is distinguished in that, once a moving object stops moving and comes to a standstill, the dwell time at standstill is counted so as to generate a signaling as a function of the dwell time. The object is described by a list or a matrix concerning the direction of movement and the time.

(Figure 1)